

The FCC should support the rights as defined within the betamax case that there is a Fair Use right available on things broadcast over the PUBLIC airwaves! This is FULLY in support of the communications act that created the FCC nearly 60 years ago! The movie industry has wildly exceeded what the copyright laws allow them as it stands - The FCC shouldn't aid and abet these people. If you look at what Valenti said about VHS/Beta tapes twenty years ago when the movie industry tried to block Video tapes, you would find he used exactly the same language. What happened was a whole new sales channel developed for the industry, independent of their own short-sighted views. Don't follow them!
